FOREIGN EDUCATION.

United States Bureau of Education Pays Attention To It.

Education in foreign countries is given special attention in a survey just issued for free distribution by the United States bureau of education, in the belief that foreign experience is particularly valuable at this time for affording light on school problems now under discussion in the United States.

In vocational training especially, the report points out, foreign experience needs to be considered. Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Norway and other European nations have for many years been making provision for industrial and technical instruction in public schools, and their systems, while undoubtedly not adaptable as a whole to American conditions, should aid materially in solving the vocational problem in the United States.

English-speaking countries have been later in adapting education to industrial needs. Canada, like the United States, is now wrestling with the problem; a commission on industrial training has been investigating the subject for the past three years. Scotland has been successful in providing continuation schools that avoid the danger of too early specialization. In Ireland municipal technical schools are transforming the city industries, just as the rural industries were transformed by the earlier agricultural movement. England herself, according to the report, "is gaining leadership among the nations by the close organization of all the agencies, social and educational, directed to the improvement of rural life." In England the necessity for better adjustment to industrial needs has been brought home by the failure of the children to continue their education beyond the primary school. It is estimated that six out of seven English children never appear in school after reaching the age of 15.

Practically every civilized nation is considered to some extent in the bureau's report. Among the special topics considered are: Health work in the schools of Great Britain; rural schools in Denmark; the teachers' syndicates in France; education for citizenship in Germany; instruction for emigrants in Italy; Robert College in Constantinople—an American foundation; Russia's efforts for rural uplift; and the partial adoption in New South Wales of the educational program of the labor party.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

"The Girl and the Baron."

One of the best musical offerings of the season "The Girl and the Baron" will be presented at the opera house on Monday, Aug. 11, with the entire original New York company. This attraction comes well recommended by both press and public from the cities where it has appeared.

Every song is new and original and is up to the minute. The costumes are very gorgeous, among them being some of the latest Parisian creations. The scenery is very grand and the electrical effects are very novel. The big Broadway number which shows "Broadway in action at midnight" is one of the most original features ever attempted on any stage.

Miss Eva Malvin, the prima donna, is due much credit for her fine voice and good singing. She makes a great hit as evidenced by the many encores. The big beauty chorus can all sing, and their systems, while undoubtedly not adaptable as a whole to American conditions, should aid materially in solving the vocational problem in the United States.

RANDOLPH

Miss Mary Boyce Bride of Ralph Norman Nichols of Braintree.

The home of Mrs. Mary Boyce on Central street was the scene of a pleasant wedding on Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. Boyce's only daughter, Mary Ethel, was united in marriage to Ralph Norman Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Nichols of Braintree.

The interior of the house was decorated with sweet peas, clematis and asparagus, and the couple took their place under an arch of roses, which was entwined with white ribbon. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Hazel Danyow.

The bride was attended by Miss Ruth Wardner, and the groom by his twin brother, Royce Nichols. Rev. Fraser Metzger officiated, and the double ring service was used. The bride was becomingly gowned in white crepe de chine, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. Her going away suit was of blue serge. Miss Marian Angell acted as ring bearer.

Following the ceremony, refreshments were served and the couple were taken by Clarence Booth in his auto, to the place where they had a team, when they started on a carriage trip to Morrisville, Middlesex, Warren and Waitsfield, and on their return they will reside on a farm in Braintree. The bride is very well known here, having lived in town for many years, and since leaving school she has been the efficient operator at the telephone exchange, where she has found many friends.

The annual service at the Old Church at Bethel will be held on Sunday, the churches from here, Bethel and Royalton uniting in the service.

Miss Mary Conolly of Washington, D. C., has arrived home to pass her vacation with her parents, who are resting from her work as monotype operator in a government office.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Packard of Braintree announce the marriage engagement of their daughter, Mary Valentine, to Newton Hale Fisher of Pasadena, Cal.

Mrs. H. A. Leonard, who has been in Concord, N. H., for a week, returned home Tuesday. Mrs. Leonard is the wife of Mr. Leonard, who is now in the service.

Mrs. Emily Sault, Miss Carrie Sault, and Miss Marion Mitchell of New York have arrived to pass a short time with relatives here.

Miss Amanda Northrop of New York has come to pass the vacation with her sister, Mrs. Alfred Webster.

Miss S. E. Maloney of New York has been passing a month at the home of W. W. Jones.

Miss Julia Treteault, a nurse in the hospital at Hion, N. Y., has come to her home through her vacation, and her mother, Mrs. Lewis Treteault, has come from Mechanicville to remain with her.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gladding have returned from a month's stay in Hyannis, and are now at their residence on the Highlands. Mrs. Minnie Miller, who has been away during their absence, has also returned home.

Mrs. Roy Holman went to Boston Thursday to meet her husband, who has been on a business trip through the state of Maine, and will return there in a few days. Their little daughter, Regia, went to Windsor to pass the time with Mrs. Clyde Randall.

Mrs. Fred Ladue, who has been living at Williamstown since her husband's transfer to Richmond, was in town Thursday to make a short call upon Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ladue, before going to Richmond to join her husband.

Miss Bessie Lewis, who has been at Beauville for the last few weeks with her mother, has a guest, Miss Lena McCaffrey, from California, who is to pass a few days with her.

Mrs. W. W. Carlin went to Northfield Wednesday, and during the stay of her son, Lewis Carlin, at the muster, will pass the time in Braintree, Roxbury and Northfield.

Mrs. W. W. Morton, who has been with her sister, Mrs. DeWitt Webb, in Boston since last April, has arrived home to remain through the month of August.

The total number of books circulated from the Kimball public library, during the month of July was 1,022, with a daily average of 39 and a fraction.

Miss Nellie Poland, a college chum of Miss Mildred Hutelins, and her sister, Miss Mary Poland, were guests of Miss Hutelins over Monday night.

The ladies live in Lebanon, N. H., and are walking from there to Warren.

GREAT WATER RESOURCES.

United States Geological Survey Publishes Report on Water Supply.

Water for irrigation is the life blood of the Hawaiian Islands. During 1911 nearly 90 per cent. of the exports of the islands to the United States, valued at more than $40,000,000, consisted of agricultural products, and of this amount 93 per cent. had either been absolutely dependent on irrigation for its growth or had required the application of water at some period of other to give the largest and most profitable yield.

Recognizing the necessity for the careful study of the water resources of the islands, the territory of Hawaii in 1909 enacted a law providing for a special income tax, one-fourth of the proceeds to be devoted to the conservation and utilization of natural resources, and entered into a co-operative agreement with the United States geological survey to make a comprehensive study of water resources. Since that time about $25,000 has been expended on this work, over $17,000 having been contributed by the territory and nearly $8,000 by the federal government. The work has been carried on by and under the direction of the geological survey, with much assistance on the part of the territory and private corporations and individuals.

As a result the geological survey has just issued a large volume of 550 pages descriptive of the water resources of the Hawaiian Islands—Water supply paper 318, by W. F. Martin and C. H. Pierce. This volume includes the result of daily measurements of the flow of volume of the principal streams and irrigation ditches in the islands in the last four years.

The critical period is approaching in Hawaiian agriculture, and the point has been reached in the utilization of water at which it is necessary to have definite information regarding the available sources of water before further progress can be made. As the limit of agricultural development in the islands is controlled principally by the possible water supply, it is necessary to tap new and undeveloped sources or else to save losses in existing supplies and so increase their economic value. The work of the geological survey has already proved of the greatest importance, some of the largest irrigation ditches, for example, having been found to be delivering much less water than was supposed.

The investigations of stream flow are, however, by no means complete, and they include all the streams that might advantageously be studied. The work is still in progress and is being pushed as rapidly as the combined appropriations of the territory and the United States will permit.

The three principal crops of Hawaii are sugar, rice, and taro. Sugar is by far the most important product, and large areas planted in cane depend entirely on irrigation. Some of the lands are naturally adapted to the growing of rice, but require a certain quantity of water varying in amount with the stage of the crop. Taro is also an important crop, furnishing the staple food for a considerable part of the population; it requires a continual application of water during its growth. Taro is a large plant which yields a root tasting somewhat like Irish potato. It is grown to a considerable extent in the United States as an ornamental plant and is popularly known as elephant's ear.

A copy of water supply paper 318 can be obtained free upon application to the director of the geological survey, Washington, D. C.

Hope for All.

Vice President Marshall is rapidly forging to first place as a public speaker of great humor, originality and power.

The vice president's ten commandments for lawyers are well known. His precept on ambition, having been given at a private luncheon, has not yet appeared in print.

"All of us," said the vice-president in Washington, "yes, all of us, may win fame. If we cannot do great deeds, let us firmly resolve to live long enough to get to be the oldest something or other."

A Little Greaser

By F. A. MITCHEL

A little Mexican girl (she might have been anywhere between fourteen and twenty; no one could tell because she was of the small kind) went into a saloon in Arizona to sell some little posies she had made of wild flowers for 1 cent each. A cowboy named Bucklin—a good looking chap—bought one, for which he paid her a quarter and wouldn't take any change. Bucklin didn't like the way she looked at him when she thanked him. There was something in that glance that meant a suddenly born love. The cowboy knew something about these hot blooded girls of the south, these greasers, and didn't care to have any of them fall in love with him. Either the love must be returned or the man loved was liable to have a tarantula put in his bed or a knife in his heart or something of the kind.

After selling Bucklin the posy the Mexican girl went up to the bar and stood beside a big fellow—Jenks, who was about as bad a specimen as the country produced, and the bad ones were very bad—and asked him to buy a posy. Looking down and seeing the girl beside him, instead of buying a posy he gave her a cuff and, with an oath, told her to "git along." Bucklin didn't
